Facts Against.

The distinguished Mr. "Mack," of the Cincinnati Commercial, general censor and adjudicator of public affairs, dispenser of merits and illuminator of the country, writes to his patrons from Lexington, Ky. touching the matter of colored troops in this State, as follows:

The President expressed great surprise when informed, recently, of the number of colored troops in Kentucky--twenty thousand--nearly all of them enlisted since the surrender of the rebel armies. He had no idea, he said, that are for so many men to perform, in a State without an armed rebel from one end of it to the other er, is not apparent to the naked eye, but that they have been there, and are now, is a matter of absolute certainty.

We have taken some pains to examine he official records on this subject, kindly endered for our inspection by Col. Sidell he conscientious, able, busy and vigilant Provost Marshal General, of the State. Since the 1st of last May precisely 1.649 negroes have been recruited into the service of the United States from Kentucky. The inal surrender of the rebel armies, it will be remembered, took place in the last week n April. So much for "nearly all of" twenty thousand troops having been enlisted since that surrender. Again, there has never been at any time, a force of twenty thousand colored Ken-iucky troops in the State. The colored regnents raised here have in a majority o cases been sent on duty out of the State as soon as organized. Some were not even organized here, but in Tennessee. At the time the late attempt to secure the removal of Gen. Palmer was initiated, there were ust ten regiments of colored troops in the State, viz: Six infantry; two cavalry, and two heavy artillery. One of these, the 135th U. S. C. V, was recruited along the line of Sherman's progress, what time he "marched lown to the sea." The number of men in hese ten regiments was a handful over ten thousand. It is well known to those who keep watch of events here that four of these regiments are now being mustered out of he service. The "so many men" therefore now in search of "particular duties" amoun at this writing to less than six thousand The reader can see from these quiet little and chronicler, the indomitable Mr. "Mack is. - Louisville Press.

Rogers and his Saints.

There is a gentleman in Memphis, calling himself the Reverend J. W. Rogers, rector of St. Lazarus' church, who wants to build a cathedral. As a cathedral always sup poses a bishop, we presume that the Reverend J. W. also aspires to the miter. He proposes to consecrate his cathedral to the "memory of the Right Reverend Leonidas Polk, D D., LL. D., the Right Reverend James H. Otey, D. D., LL. D., and other confederate dead," and to make it "worthy of these fallen heroes." The names of the confederate saints are to be inscribed upon mural tablets, frescoed walls, and memorial windows, and pious worshippers are to gaze upon them through tearful eyes and honor them with reverential hearts for ages yet to come. He invites contributions toward this sacred work from all "southern cities," leaving each contributor at liberty to choose his ing each contributor at liberty to choose his own special patron among the confederate dead, and promising that every saint so specified shall receive honorable mention in the aforesaid inscriptions. Consequently there would be a fair prospect, should his plan be carried out, of seeing Wilkes Booth, Champ Ferguson, and may be at some future day Captain Wirz, held up to veneration on the altars of this new temple of the dispensation of wickedness. Some people think that the Protestant Episcopal Church of which J. W. R. is a shining member, has long been gravitating towards Rome, but this canonization of traitors, this elevation of treachery, perjury, and murder to the rank of heroic Christian virtues, exceeds all that the wildest of Protestants ever attribu ted to the worst of popes. It is worth serious notice, as an indication

Frank Blair made a speech at Rolla, Miss., on Thursday night, in which he bitterly assailed Secretary Stanton, asserting that "When Stanton had Alex. H. Stephens locked up, the good, loyal and true man was inside, and the rascal and traitor upon the outside." Blair stigmatized the provost marshals of the west as "a set of this ving applied to the martyred hero's administraplunderers generally," and charged the officers of the western army with all sorts of corruption-alleging, among other things, that, when Grant captured Vicksburg, a hundred thousand bales of cotton fell into his hands, and were turned over to the government -- of which amount not a thousand bales were ever accounted for.

The Episcopal General Convention adjourned yesterday. Its most remarkable action was the negative one of omitting to express any thankfulness for the restoration of the Union and the abolition of slavery. So great was its squeamishness on these subjects that the usual address of the House of Bishops was omitted. Bishop Hopkins, of Vermont, had prepared an address which was too obnoxious to the loyal minority for publication, and a truly loyal one by Bishop McIlvaine was voted down by the "conservative" majority. It will, however, be informally pub-

The Conservatives and Martial Law.

The rejoicings of the Conservatives over the revoking of Martial Law still continue. They are jubilant beyond measure. There are no bonds to their happiness. They make merry without stint. The Lexington organ is perfectly intoxicated with gladness. Judging from its writings it can think of nothing else. Now the propriety of all this joy depends on the cause which gives rise to it. To rejoice that martial law has ceased because there is no longer a necessity for it is proper. To be glad that martial law may be revoked because the war has ceased, the authority of the Government over all the States is established, the Union is preserved. and the power of the Government cannot be overcome-all this is right.

But does the joy of those who are making such demonstrations arise from these considerations? Not at all. We have yet to hear the first note of rejoicing from this faction over the revocation of martial law because its necessity has passed. On the contrary they declare that the necessity for it never existed. Under it, according to the that has been urged, to wit: to secure equal Conservative view, the State has suffered "our years of miserable bondage," the people "have been subject to an absolute military despotism, inflicted upon them in defiance of the express provisions of the Constitution," and wrongs have been inflicted such as a free people never before suffered States which may be included within the by this "unjust and unwarrantable exercise Union according to the number of male citizen. of military authority." Martial law from the beginning of the rebellion is condemned, not its continuance since the war has ended or enumeration of such citizens shall be made the loyalty of the State been established. by the census of the United States. The new born love of the Democracy for President Johnson is waxing cold. In fact their regard never rose to the dignity of love. It was a mere liaison formed for the gratification of their unholy lust for power. In their hearts they still hated the "boorish tailor," as they have delighted to call him. What should change this hate? Just what Mr. Johnson was when he was elected to office he is now. The principles which governed Mr. Lincoln-whom the Democracy hunted to his death-in his administrative acts, still govern his successor. President Johnson is carrying out the acts of President Lincoln, enforces his proclamations and is working according to his plan and views in the reconstruction of the country. Yet the acts and proclamations of the latter are now condemned as vehemently as they ever Mr. O'Donahue was shot and fatally woundtion. President Johnson's views with regard to slavery and negro suffrage, too, are in almost exact accord with the views of his predecessor.

For this alone they praise the President, for this they love him. But their praise is growing faintertheir love is waning. President Johnson has put his foot down firmly on both their favorite dogmas, State Sovereignty and Slavery, and has declared himself in favor of ne gro suffrage. So the Cincinnati Enquirer, the New York News, and others of their sect are dropping him. He is not the good Democrat they thought him-so, though his patriotism and wise, statesmanlike views and policy still remain and work, they are forsaking him. So be it. The President will congratulate himself, for truly damning is the praise and love of such friends.

DESCRIPTION.

Wm. J. Gray is about 23 years of age, 6 feet high and stoops a little. Wore, when last seen, long, light auburn hair. Has blue eyes, long nose, sallow complexion. Acted at one time as a guer-rilla with Capt. Hedge in Nelson, Bullitt, and Spencer counties. Oct. 24, 1865-3m.

G. W. HOWE, J. P.

I have been giving more more or less of time this season to a specially, viz, the examination of grape soils, location, and modes of culture, training, &c. I am not prepared, as yet, to say much pro or con; but perhaps a little record of what I have seen and heard this season, may be of use to you in making up the pages of the Horticulturist from time to time.

My observations at this time, taken in connection with previous years, convince me that while grapes of some variety may be grown in any soil and almost any locality, there are really but few localities, and a small territory of soil suited to growing of grapes for making a fine wine. I do not think that, as a whole, the class of wines now made and sold will be tolerated ten years hence, and, therefore, the grower of grapes, looking to their manufacture into the quality of grape requisite, and the com ponents in soil that will supply those requisites. My present impression of the value of soils for growing wine grapes, is about as fol-1st. Calcerous limestone.

Calcerous clay.

Limestone clay.

Clay loam. 5th. Gravelly loam.

6th. Sandy loam. The first and second will grow and ripen fruit containing a less per centage of acid than the third and fourth, while the fifth and sixth are soils in which I question the practicability of growing any grape, and rip-ening it to form a wine without the addition of some foreign matter.

I know there are drift formations on some of the islands, and on the shore of Lake Erie, where the appearance is of a gravelly loam, and where the grape grows and apparently ripens well. I know, als, that it is believed by some that such drift formations contain within them materials to give all the requisites to good wine. I have yet to see the good wine, and, therefore, you may note that I leave out these localities in my esti mate respecting gravelly loams. I wait to

So much for soils. Now let me add that localities are best, as I now view the matter

1st. Those abutting on large bodies of water, or where the prevailing cold winds of autumn and spring pass over the water, and within one mile of the vineyard.

2d. High, hilly locations, where there are adjacent rivers or large ponds of water, and. as before, so placed that the cold winds o autumn and spring pass over the water, and within half a mile of the vineyard. With the 1st or 2d class of soils, and either of the above locations-the land underdrained-profitable results may confidently be anticipated by the planter and grower of a vineyard, especially if bone meal and gypsum be added as a manure to the 2nd

The territory abutting on the shores, and embraced in the Islands of Lake Erie, now devoted to grape culture, is probably over 5,000 ocres. Of this 600 acres lie between Buffalo and Erie; 600 acres between Erie Pa., and Cuyahoga county, in Ohio; 1,200 acres in Cuyahoga county; 200 acres in Lorain county; 700 acres in Eric county, exclusive of the Islands: 800 acres on Kelly Island, and 400 acres on South Bass, Middle Bass Peninsula, and parts of Ottawa county. The balance, 500 acres, we may safely assert, is to be found west of the territory here

Of these 5,000 acres, three-fifths are probably Catawba, two-fifths Isabella, and the remaining one-fifth made up of Delaware, Concord, and other varieties. The distance apart in the ingest proportion of the remaining of the remaining one-fifth made up of Delaware, Concord, and other varieties. The distance apart in the ingest proportion of the remaining of the apartin the legest proportion of the vine-yards, I think, will be found six by eight feet: but nearly an recent plant be been eight by eight and eight by ten feet.

The crop this year will probably be on short 3.500 acres of the 5,000, and will average, notwithstanding deductions to be made for rot and mildew, and the quantity of acres first year in bearing, say not far from two and a half tuns to the acre. This will give 17500 fbs, which, at an average ce of seven cents per pound, will be $1, 225,000 or $350 per acre.

This is, perhaps, a low average, as there are quite a large number of acres on which from five to eight tuns per acre will proba bly be gathered; bnt I prefer putting my esti mates so that I can safely cover all the ground, as I then show a better return for capital invested than perhaps any other reliable and permanent interest will exhibit .-F. R. Elliot, in Horticulturist for October.

The Potato Rot.

The Gardners' Magazine gives the following advice as to the crop; where the disease Ky. State Stock, 6 per ct.,

is apparent: "Take them up at once, whether full ripe or still growin vigorously, whether healthy or diseased large or small, get them out of the ground, sorted over, and stored as quickly as possible. They will ripen in N. Y. State Stock, 6 pr. ct., store, especially if stored where they have a chance of drying. If left in the ground they will scarcely increase in bulk now, and for what little gain there might be in their increase, the risk of entire loss by decrease is too great to be incorred for it. While is too great to be incurred for it. While our readers have the circumstances attending this outbreak of potato disease tresh in their memories, it may be as well to point to the fact that after much heat and partial drought, we have had heavy rains, an atmosphere highly charged with electricity, and in a condition of total saturation with moisture & Chicago R. R. Compa-The tubers have had to grow during a dry heat, and to moisten during a moist heat. We may call attention to these matters hereafter; we name them now in order to fix upon the minds of all who are interested in the matter, what is the exact cause that demands consideration. We began on the 1st of August to harvest our own crop, and the work still proceeds. Our collection amounts to over seventy sorts; the yield is good, the tubers of fair size, and upto the present moment the only examples of diseased tubers have occurred in a breadth or Early Shaw. About a twentieth part of the yield of this was bad; the rest quite sound. These were taken up on the 15th of August. On land close adjoining, and on which potatoes are grown in a somewhat different manner to ours, a large proportion of the crop is 220 Shares Farmers and Me-
